This office action is responsive to communications filed 03/03/04.

Claims 1 – 19 are pending.

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

3. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Corlett et al. (US 6,379,538) in view of Yamasaki et al. (US 6,177,005).

Corlett et al. discloses (See Fig. 1, for example) an apparatus for recovering drained water i.e. effluent of a processing station (12), comprising:

A detection apparatus that comprises measuring conductivity of the effluent (Col. 3, lines 20 - 21) and channeling the drained water to a recovery tank (38) by controlling a three-way valve (26) and further channeling the drained water to a buffer tank (at 52).

The apparatus of Corlett et al. discloses the claimed invention with the exception of explicitly disclosing measurement of total organic carbonic (TOC) content in the buffer tank.

Yamasaki et al. (US 6,177,005) discloses (see Fig. 11, for example) that it is known in the art to measure TOC content in the buffer tank (234) and channeling the drained water from the buffer tank to an interim tank (235) and therefrom to a first raw water tank (251) or a second raw water tank (236), for the purpose of producing an ultrapure water with a very low TOC content.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have provided in Corlett et al. a means for measurement of total organic carbonic (TOC) content in the buffer tank, for the purpose of producing an ultrapure water with a very low TOC content, as recognized by Yamasaki et al.

It is noted that the combination of Corlett et al. and Yamasaki et al. necessarily performs the method recited in claim 6 in its usual and normal operation.

4. Claims 1 – 5 and 15 – 19 are allowed.
5. Claims 7 – 14 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
